John Eischen is Executive Director of Rochester Area Builders, Inc. (RAB) an education and event management company that reinvests its profits in advocacy on behalf of the construction industry in southeast Minnesota (in other words, a local builders' trade association). With 25 years' experience in the construction industry, John is uniquely qualified to understand the challenges and opportunities that the industry faces and works hard to provide RAB members with an environment that helps them to be successful.

John studied English and Business Administration at The Winona State University while working as a bartender and waiter. Unbeknownst to John, that job experience would also be beneficial to his role at RAB when preparing for events, meetings and interacting with RAB members.

In his spare time, John enjoys brewing and consuming home brewed beer which goes hand-in-hand with his other pursuit of sidestepping the quagmire that is living with teenage daughters.
